Paris, May 13 (AP)—French military spokesmen declared tonight that the German advance through southern Holland and Belgium appeared to be checked.

Troops Are Rushed

Paris, May 13 (AP)—Germany pushed her attack against the Netherlands and Belgium with redoubled violence today as French reinforcements rushed to aid the besieged lowlands, the French high command reported in a communique.

The enemy attack was reported to be particularly severe in the region north of the Albert Canal, apparently in an effort to widen the breach already forced in the canal fortifications which make up a vital part of Belgium's defense system.

The Germans also threw heavy concentrations into the sector southeast of Tirlemont, which is only 25 miles east of Brussels.

Other major points in the renewed Nazi drive, the French communique said, were in the Belgian Ardennes mountains, which face German-occupied Luxembourg, and in the region between the Albert Canal and the lower Rhine.

(This apparently was the Dutch province of North Brabant, where the Dutch high command reported French reinforcements had made contact with the enemy.)

French planes zoomed over the advancing German columns during the day and night, bombing and machine-gunning them time and again and bringing down a total of 12 Nazi planes during the night.

A war ministry spokesman announced that Edouard Daladier, member of the war cabinet and minister of national defense, arrived in Belgium yesterday.

Received by King

The spokesmen said the French war minister, accompanied by high British and French officials, was received by King Leopold III of Belgium and visited outposts along the Belgian-French frontier.

The war ministry spokesman said the action in which the French advance guards were backing up the Belgians in their fight against tremendous German thrusts in the Tongres region and the Belgian Ardennes was the prelude to a gigantic battle which might be expected in the next day or two, when the main body of the allied forces will be in position.

On the French main front, a full German division was stopped in an attack east of the Moselle river, the spokesman said. In the Ohrenthal salient of the Forbach region, French outpost forces dropped back to their first line of fortified positions when the Germans charged after heavy artillery preparations.

The French and Germans also were at grips along the Franco-Luxembourg frontier.

A French armored car unit stopped a German column in the Tongres region yesterday as the Germans sought to press on to the west after capturing the Dutch city of Maastricht. Tongres is 10 miles west of Maastricht.

Allied planes subjected the German rear lines to a heavy bombardment.

Vigorous Thrust

In Belgium's Ardennes mountains, German units launched a vigorous thrust with forces spread out along a line from east to west. In Holland the Germans continued to apply pressure along the river IJssel, which they succeeded in crossing at several points, the spokesman said. But

Columbia County's Entry Takes First Hudson Valley Honors at Selection Following Coronation Parade; Events Prizes Are Awarded

Ellen Allardice, Hudson High School senior and Columbia county's beautiful blonde choice for honors in the annual apple blossom celebration, was crowned queen of the seven counties participating in the Hudson Valley Apple Blossom Festival Saturday afternoon.

The coronation ceremonies, held at the Municipal Stadium, in the presence of a crowd which filled the stand and bleachers and available standing room in front of the stands, climaxed the third and most elaborate of these colorful spring festivals.

At the conclusion of the parade the contestants for queen, with their attendants and others took their place on the stage which had been erected in the playing field.

Bright Presides

Henry R. Bright, chairman of the festival committee, presided at the ceremonies and after the playing of "The Star Spangled Banner," by the New Paltz Normal School Band, introduced Mayor C. J. Heiselman. The mayor spoke briefly, calling attention to the success that had followed cooperative efforts by the counties of the Hudson Valley. He also contrasted the present scene of festivity and joyousness, beautiful girls vying with the beauties of nature, with the scene of carnage and destruction existing in Europe.

Announcement of the various winners in the prize competitions was then made. Mrs. Howard A. Lewis, described the costumes worn by the different county queens and also announced the winners in the pie baking contest. Justice F. Walter Bliss announced the winning floats and Mr. Lewis the winners in the band competition.

The contestants for queen, and the judges then retired and the crowd was amused with some tumbling acts, until Chairman Bright returned and announced the decision of the judges.

And Gets His Kiss

Shortly afterward Queen Ellen appeared, escorted by Captain Charles Behrens of the 156th Field Artillery, making her way through the sun shone throughout the afternoon, but occasionally would disappear under the clouds, a token of the rain that fell later in the

War Talk Spreads Capital Feeling F.D.R. Might Run

Chief Executive Expected to Withhold Statement Until Eve of Party Assembly in July

Washington, May 13 (AP)—The campaign to renominate President Roosevelt swept ahead today amid mounting capital opinion that the European war spread had increased the possibility of his running again.

Many politicians in Washington have felt for months that the President's ultimate announcement of his third term views would depend in large measure on the foreign situation.

For this reason, they are more ready than ever to believe that he will withhold a statement accepting or rejecting renomination until it actually has been tendered, or at least until the eve of the Democratic convention July 15.

Senator Reed (R., Kans.) told reporters that if the Republicans "can't beat Roosevelt on two issues—the third term and involvement in the European war—then we can't beat anyone." Reed asserted the President's re-election "would surely mean taking part in the European war."

Iowa was added Saturday night to the states whose Democratic delegations have been pledged to Mr. Roosevelt. The 22 Iowa votes will go to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace "if for any reason the President is unavailable."

On the same day, a majority of county delegates for the forthcoming Oklahoma and North Carolina state conventions were instructed to vote for a Roosevelt slate.

The President is expected to receive the support of the big Ohio delegation to be chosen in a primary tomorrow, although it will be pledged nominally to national Committeeman Charles Sawyer.

Ohio Republicans will select a delegation favoring Robert A. Taft, the state's junior senator. Although this will be Taft's first pledged delegation—aside from two votes in North Carolina—his managers have contended that he will enter the convention with more votes than Thomas E. Dewey of New York, who now leads in instructed delegates.

Additional Reservists Are Called Out to Strengthen Army of 1,250,000 in Area Facing France; Police Foil Student Demonstrations

Rome, May 13 (AP)—In the midst of a rising anti-allied campaign, Italy busily reinforced her Littorio line of fortified positions along the western Alpine frontier facing France today and, according to Italian sources, called out additional reservists to reinforce her army of 1,250,000 men.

There were two major expressions of anti-allied sentiment, one a series of student demonstrations that brought out 500 soldiers and police to protect the British and French embassies, the other continued propaganda against British-French control in the Mediterranean.

Troops and police prevented the student demonstration from reaching the two embassies. Students who had marched through the streets with an Italian flag dispersed after spectators said they had heard them shouting for war.

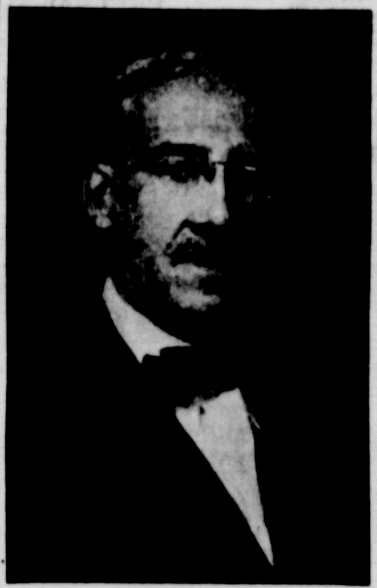

In addition, Catholic sources announced that English and Scottish seminaries for student priests were being closed and that the Belgian seminary had been closed.

No confirmation of the call for fresh reservists was available in authoritative quarters on the grounds that it was military information.

Order Is 10 for 1

Germans Say They Will Kill 10 French Troops for Each Nazi

Berlin, May 13 (AP)—German troops have broken into strategic Liege and the German flag has waved over the citadel of the famous fortress since this morning, the high command announced.

Belgian troops are fighting bitterly against the crushing German advance, however, and are offering opposition in some of the other forts of Liege, it said.

Even as the Nazis pressed their onslaught in the lowlands toward what Germans expected to be one of the great battles of history, other Nazi forces in the west took the offensive on the French frontier.

"South and southeastward from Zweibrücken, our positions were moved forward and several hundred prisoners were taken," the high command reported from the Westwall-Magnot line front.

(In Brussels, the Belgian high command declared Belgian forces had "maintained their positions everywhere" during last night but acknowledged that early today "enemy motorized forces delivered new attack against all our positions.")

(An authoritative British source said the German offensive in the Netherlands was developing as expected and was attempting to drive a wedge between the Belgian and Dutch armies.)

The German high command, meanwhile, declared that wherever it was shown that German parachute troops were killed in a manner "contrary to international law," ten captured French soldiers would be shot for every Nazi parachutist so killed.

This was Germany's retort to the charges of French Premier Reynaud yesterday that German parachute soldiers were disguised as Belgian and Dutch troops and that any disguised Nazi parachutists found in France would be shot immediately.)

The high command said French troops in the lowlands were moving up and had been thrown into the area south of Liege and west of the Ourthe river, toward which it said German troops were moving.

German troops also are driving west from Liege, north of the Meuse river.

The communique, issued from Adolf Hitler's headquarters with his army, said:

"The attack of German forces in the west made good progress on May 12.

"In Holland, German troops are moving forward west of the South Willem Canal. They have established contact with troops landed by air around Rotterdam.

"In Belgium, the crossing of the Albert Canal was forced north-west of Hasselt. Our troops are moving forward west of Liege and north of the Meuse and have broken into the city of Liege.

"The German flag has waved on the citadel since the forenoon of May 13 while individual outer forts still resist.

"French troops have been thrown west of the Ourthe and in southern Belgium. Our troops are there in a fluid advance and are beginning to approach the goal set up.

"South and southeastward from Zweibrücken (on the Westwall-Magnot front), our positions were moved forward and several hundred prisoners were taken. The advance of our army was supported effectively by the air force with attacks on troop concentrations, march columns and railroads.

"The airforce continues its great battle for air superiority over the western area of operations with noticeable success. In all, on May 12, 320 planes were destroyed, among them 58 in air fights, 72 by anti-aircraft fire and the rest on the ground. Twenty-five planes were brought down during a British attack at Maastricht by anti-aircraft fire. A single air squadron succeeded in shooting down 16.

"Our own losses, compared to the enemy and measured by our successes, were slight again yesterday. They consisted of 31 planes.

"The enemy also suffered heavy damage at sea.

Large Crowd Views Festival Pageant

The program of the third Apple Blossom Festival which this year embraced the Hudson Valley, opened with a large pageant at the municipal stadium Saturday morning.

The day of revelry was given in honor of Johnny Appleseed, legendary figure who believed it to be his first duty to plant apple seeds and propagate apples as a pioneer planter. The pageant celebrated the success of the early settlers in perpetuating his work.

One of the largest crowds ever to gather at the stadium and almost as large as the one at the coronation in the afternoon witnessed the program of music and dancing.

Little Phyllis Mary Cornwell, dressed in a Kate Greenaway dress of blue silk, was led to the throne and crowned with a wreath of rosebuds by Johnny Appleseed as portrayed by Sam Gersky, of the Newburgh Dramatic School. Seated on the stage were six members of the Tri-Hi Club of the Y. W. C. A. and the six attendants to Miss Virginia Hoffman, Ulster County Queen.

During the program Henry R. Bright, general chairman of the festival, presented each of the seven queen contestants to the audience and the judges, after which they left for luncheon at the Governor Clinton Hotel.

Numbers on the program were given by the New Paltz State Normal Band under the direction of Howard B. Hoffman, the Helen Turner Chorus, pupils from the Rutherford School of the Dance, a group of Highland women, members of the School of Modern Dance, New Paltz State Normal School and Miss Louise Matilage, solo dancer.

The stage arrangement was in charge of Miss Ottilia Riccobono and Mrs. Howard A. Lewis, of Kingston, and Mrs. William Denby of Highland were in charge of the pageant.

'Slave' Island to Erect

Statue for Gen. Grant
WASHINGTON. — On the tiny island of Bolama, off the Guinea coast of West Africa, where slave traders once reaped a rich harvest in "black gold," authorities are planning to erect a monument to Ulysses S. Grant, leader in the war that freed the American slaves, says a bulletin from the National Geographic society.

"According to dispatches from the Portuguese colony of Guinea, the revenue from its new stamp tax on bills of exchange will be used to honor Grant, in commemoration of his official recognition in 1870 of Portugal's possession of Bolama island. Today this island holds the capital and second port of the colony. Also named Bolama, the capital has a good natural harbor from which the colony ships much of its tropical produce of ground nuts and palm oil. Surrounded by French territory, Portuguese Guinea has a total population of about 350,000, including some 2,000 Europeans.

"During the early slave-trade operations along the Guinea coast one fifteenth century expedition left the following record: 'It pleased God, rewarder of good deeds, to compensate the navigators for the many hardships undergone in His service, and to award them at last some triumph and glory for their sufferings, and compensation for their outlays, for they possessed themselves of 165 heads of men, women and children.'"

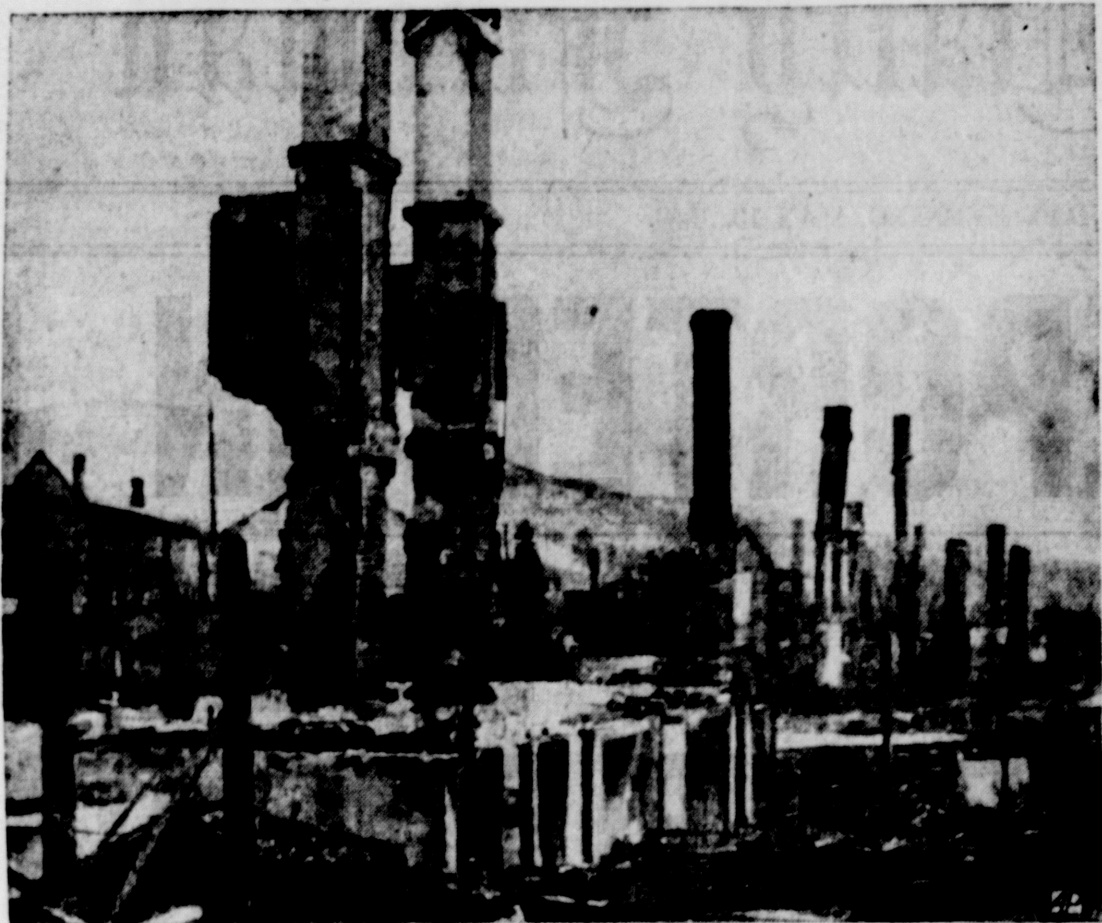

Motor Buses Now Use

Stage Coaches' Corral
FREDERICKSBURG, TEXAS.—Sleek motor buses now run into the same corral here where dusty stage coaches once delivered passengers. The corral was at the Nimitz hotel, a landmark on the western trail across Texas. Founded by a German sea captain, the hotel was built ship-shape. Its register, still preserved, shows that Gen. Robert E. Lee (then Lt. R. E. Lee, U. S. A.) was an occasional guest. O. Henry often alighted from the stage there.

STEINKJER—A CEMETERY OF CHIMNEYS

This is how the main shopping street of Steinkjer, Norway, looked two hours after Nazi war planes had peppered the town of 4,000 with bombs during the last week in April when the British retreated as the Germans took control of all central and southern Norway. This exclusive picture was taken by Paul Melander, Swedish photographer, who was the only cameraman to get into this area. He reached Steinkjer between two German air raids and took this picture about one hour before the British troops retreated to the north.

This view of desolation centers around the old church of Namsos, Norway, showing it and the surrounding area in ruins. The church was only a shell after the German aerial bombardment during the last week of April. This exclusive picture was taken by Paul Melander, Swedish photographer—the only cameraman to get into this Norse area.

More men were employed in the steel industry in 1939 than in 1929, but total payrolls were about 3 per cent less, reflecting the fact that the length of the work week had been considerably reduced and that about 15 per cent less steel was produced last year than in 1929. Under these conditions the 1939 average annual wage was about 10 per cent less than 1929.

Last year's total of steel taxes was 37 per cent greater than the total of $103,000,000 levied on the industry in 1929, although the industry's output last year was 15 per cent below the 1929 tonnage. The 1929 tax bill consumed 21 per cent of the net earnings before taxes for that year, a share considerably less than half the portion taken by taxes in 1939.

At the business meeting reports were made on the attendance of the society at the Holy Name rally to be held in Poughkeepsie on Sunday, June 16, when it is expected that 500 men from St. Mary's parish will be present.

The rally will be under the direction of the Very Rev. Msgr. Stephen P. Connelly, V. F., dean of Dutchess county, and former assistant pastor of St. Mary's Church, Kingston. IN CHARGE OF Traffic!

USE THE PROGRESSIVE MERCHANTS' GUIDE TO MORE SALES VOLUME—

The Daily Freeman

THE PROBLEM of getting sufficient customer traffic into a store is recognized by every merchant. With few exceptions, the life and success of a business is in direct proportion to the number of possible buyers that daily pass through the doors. Similarly, every established merchant realizes that the customer who enters his place of business is in search of certain quality at a certain price. The successful business man stocks the items in the quantities and qualities desired by his customers.

But after a merchant stocks the right merchandise and recognizes the need for customer traffic, what shall he do then?

He can follow the lead of successful merchants still further! He can advertise! He can tell 10,182 families living in Kingston and its environs about his business and his merchandise. He can make them special attractive offers to increase his store traffic.

How can he reach those necessary 10,182 families for the least amount of money and with the greatest amount of certainty?

He can advertise in the Daily Freeman, the newspaper that is read and accepted by over 10,182 Kingston families daily!

"DAY IN AND DAY OUT" ADVERTISING IN THE DAILY FREEMAN BRINGS CONSISTENT RESULTS!

Case histories of ads run by consistent advertisers show an even greater degree of success than those run by occasional advertisers. Regular Daily Freeman advertisers build up an acceptance in the minds of readers. Their ads have an identifying continuity that potential customers look for. Day in and day out advertisers secure consistently excellent results. If you are in business in Kingston and are not now an advertiser in the Daily Freeman, we urge you to investigate the Freeman's possibilities for you!

Editor Addresses St. Peter's Holy Name Here Sunday

Richard Reid, lawyer, lecturer and editor of Catholic News, nationally prominent Catholic weekly of New York, speaking at the Communion breakfast of St. Peter's Holy Name Society, Sunday morning in the Governor Clinton Hotel, pointed out that nationwide removal of misunderstanding of true Catholic principles will provide a bulwark against the inroads of Communist and Nazism.

Nearly 250 men received Communion at the 8 o'clock Mass in St. Peter's Church Sunday morning and well over 200 attended the breakfast immediately after, the proceedings of which were broadcast over station WKNY.

Fred C. Harder, president of the society, started the speaking program with an expression of gratification on the number of men that received Communion and the attendance at the breakfast. President Harder then introduced the Rev. Henry E. Herdegen, spiritual director of the society.

Father Herdegen commented upon the appropriate day the society selected for its Communion breakfast, Sunday being Pentecost and Mother's Day, and remarked upon the importance of the home to the Catholic family.

A true home, stated Father Herdegen, contains a bond of affection for the natural mother and is guided by the Spirit of the Holy Ghost. Heat is a condition of human existence, continued Father Herdegen, and the fire of love for the Holy Ghost is necessary for the life of the soul.

In introducing Mr. Reid, Father Herdegen referred to the charitable manner in which the editor has combatted bigotry and his promotion of friendly relations between neighbors, irrespective of creed.

Combating Prejudice. Mr. Reid told of his experiences during 19 years with the Bulletin, a Catholic periodical, organized by the Catholic Laymen's Association of Georgia to mitigate a religious prejudice which was rampant in that state in 1916.

Catholics in Georgia, said Mr. Reid, form but one-half of one per cent of the total population and the religious prejudice against this small group was built up by one man looking for an avenue of political gain. To combat the spread of this feeling, laymen of Georgia met in Macon to consider this subject and later established the Catholic Laymen's Association with a publicity bureau in Augusta.

The first step, said Mr. Reid, was an advertisement in Georgia papers offering to answer any questions regarding the Catholic faith. The prejudice, stated Mr. Reid, was caused almost entirely by one person capitalizing on misunderstanding, and when the facts were shown a spirit of cooperation ensued.

Later, continued the editor, all anti-Catholic articles in any of Georgia's 185 weekly and 15 daily newspapers were refuted with letters showing the facts. Some of the papers refused to print the letters so the Bulletin was founded, in which all such refutations were printed. At first the association wrote an average of 100 letters weekly but now, because of a better understanding of Catholic principles only about two a month are necessary.

Thorough Knowledge. Mr. Reid said to know the Catholic Church is to love it and urged all the men present to secure a thorough knowledge of their religion which would also enable them to correct misinformation on the part of others. To spread the true facts of the church, said Mr. Reid, is to do a service to the church and the nation and is a sure way to combat Communism and Nazism.

Mr. Reid interspersed his address with humorous anecdotes to illustrate his points.

At the conclusion of the lecturer's talk, President Harder extended to Mr. Reid the society's sincere thanks and complimented him upon a most interesting discourse. The president also thanked WKNY officials for making it possible to broadcast the affair and extended his appreciation to the committee in charge of arrangements. The program closed with prayer.

Kenneth Geary was chairman of the breakfast committee and was assisted by George Reis, Henry Harder, Charles Styles and the officers of the society.

BATTLE FOR LOW COUNTRIES RAGES ON

Hammering the Allies from Holland to the Moselle river sector, Germany apparently gained ground but with heavy losses. Germans landed troops on beach at (1) The Hague; (2) Nazis advanced into Holland as Dutch retreated to stronger lines; (3) Germans advanced here and claimed capture of a major Liege fort; (4) Nazi columns in Luxembourg were reported halted by allied troops; (5) a full Nazi division, 14,000 men, smashed at the Maginot Line in an apparent effort to draw allied reinforcements here. Shaded area in Holland has been flooded for defense; vertical shading in Belgium and France indicates defense line.

LITTLE SPITFIRE

By Jean Randall

Chapter 34

The Spitfire Surrenders

BRENDA caught her breath and went on as though the need for speech had become too great to be denied. "I know I was interfering, and a little idiot besides—go to Mr. Hopkins! I know it has put you in an embarrassing position. Eric—but I won't blame Eric, though certainly I was not told the facts. I blame only myself. I can't imagine what has made me act so. I never did in New York; or at least if I tried to help people there—in the Village especially—it always turned out right, and they were not upset. Sometimes they were even pleased—though I know you must find that difficult to believe. Mac, I'm sorry. That's really all I can say, isn't it? If I knew anything else to say—"

"There is one thing you can say, as it happens," he told her soberly. "It's why I persuaded Linda to send for you—so you could say it!"

She hung her head. "I know what you mean. You want me to acknowledge that from the first I've been a thorn in the side of The Street—both sides. I suppose, well, I do. Acknowledge it, I mean."

"No, Brenda. That's not at all what I want you to say." He shoved his hands in his pockets and looked perturbed. "I'm not sure I ought to let you say it, even if it happened to be true. Brenda, did you ever wonder why I left The Street—Adelaide's house?"

"I knew," she said dreadingly. "I didn't have to wonder. You were afraid you would be the next victim of my officiousness. And ever moving away didn't save you, did it? I've said I'm sorry!"

"I was sorry for my money?" The words shot from him with force. "My money? What money?"

"The Burnham fortune. I heard about it the first day I went to live on The Street. Everybody took care to impress on me the extent of your grandfather's wealth. We all heard more times than I can count how your aunt had a personal maid; how your grandfather thought nothing of paying five thousand dollars for a saddle horse; how—"

"Her eyes widened to their greatest extent."

"That's all true, Mac, but—"

"And I on a salary," he interrupted bitterly. "Good enough as salaries go these days, but nothing to offer the young heiress to the Burnham millions!"

"One tiny dimple made a fleeting appearance at the corner of her mouth."

"Not millions, Mac. Not even one million. Lots of money, but not that much."

"Too much, at any rate. Why that fur coat you wore this winter would have cost three months' of my salary! I'd have a nerve to think of asking a girl like you to marry me."

If he had looked up he would have seen a second dimple come blithely into the open; but he kept his gloomy gaze on the floor.

Words Of One Syllable

"AUNT ANNE gave me the coat for a Christmas gift. Poor dear, I'm afraid she denied herself a good many things to pay for it!"

"I suppose so; things like an English butler to replace the parlormaid."

"Parlormaid? You talk like an English novel, Mac. Aunt Anne has no parlormaid."

"Of course she hasn't!" he said warmly and inconsistently. "She's had her English butler from the beginning. Judge Harper said your grandfather had the only butler The Street ever boasted."

"Yes. Old black Selby. He belonged to the Selbys—that was my grandmother's family—in slave times."

He shrugged his shoulders. "There you are! Old family retainers then. English butlers now!"

She took a step toward him. "Is that all you have against me now, Mac—one lone English butler?"

"And all he stands for."

"There is no butler," she told him softly. "I mean—Aunt Anne has only one servant, Mac. She cooks and does the general cleaning. Aunt Anne dusts, and gets dinner herself on Thursday night."

"An eccentric, eh? Saving it all up to hand on to you!"

"Of course if you're determined not to understand!" She took a lofty tone with him. "I'll try to tell you in words of one syllable: Aunt Anne has one maid because—I mean since it's all she can afford—I mean she can spend a badly arranged sentence. Mac, but one syllable words are hard to find even to convey very simple facts."

"She's turned it all over to you already!"

Brenda lost patience. "You're misunderstanding purposely!"

"Thank you," he said heatedly. "I may be dumb but at least I know better than to ask a child of luxury to share an apartment with me—maybe even to cook my meals unless we could get a part time maid—"

"Being the child of luxury?"

"He raised stern eyes to her then. "This talk amuses you, I have no doubt."

"I should say it does!" was the frank reply. "Considering that Grandfather's money evaporated long ago, and Aunt Anne lost most of hers in the stock market crash."

"Brenda!"

She stretched a forbidding hand toward him. "No, Mac! I'm not going to be done out of a real proposal." The dimples were a merry riot now, but she kept her voice authoritative. "I'm not going to let you throw it up to me in later years that my officiousness snared you into—"

The authoritative voice ceased. It is difficult if not impossible to articulate clearly when one's face is buried in a tumbled shroud.

Love Scene

TWENTY minutes later Linda poked a cautious head around the door. Then she gave a subdued whoop which brought Hugh running.

"And high time, too," he growled, his mouth stretched in a wide smile. "I need my studio to work in. If you're through staging this love scene I'll be obliged if you'll go somewhere else."

"But he was determined to lose the use of his working room for the entire morning. The news flew up and down The Street in a fashion peculiar to that interested neighborhood."

Before the laughing couple could take themselves off, Judge Harper appeared, beaming and shaking hands with Mac, kissing Brenda affectionately.

"So we aren't to lose you from The Street after all," he said. "That's a great satisfaction to me."

"I-I fear we won't be living here, sir," Mac said. "You see, Brenda and I will want our own home—at least I suppose you do, Brenda? I really haven't time to ask her," he finished with a grin.

"Certainly our own home," she told him firmly.

The Judge looked surprised. "I forget I haven't told you the news! I must be getting old and forgetful even though Sarah says I'm not old at all, only mature."

"Sarah?"

"Mrs. Wick." The Judge actually blushed. "She—er—I—er—it's this way: we're to be married very soon, and she doesn't want to leave her own house. I understand that a woman grows more attached—and of course there's Frances, too. So when we knew that things were going to be all right with you and Brenda, my dear boy, I mentioned to Sarah that it would please me to give you my house for a wedding present."

"Just a minute," Mac interrupted dazedly. "How on earth could you know they were going to be all right? We didn't know ourselves until about twenty minutes ago."

Linda informed him. "I heard you two rowing, so I knew everything was going well. I telephoned—well, several of those most interested."

Which was why, Brenda supposed, the studio soon resembled a mob scene. Everybody was there except Dr. Van Ness, who was out making calls, and Grenadine, who sulked for the rest of the day because Mrs. Rostetter had forbidden her to leave the house.

"Aren't they dear?" Brenda commented when, just before lunch time she found herself alone with Mac. "Oh, I do think this is the nicest street in the world! Think of our having the Judge's house for our very own!"

But not for nothing was Dion MacKelvey an advertising man. He firmly ignored all side issues.

"Kiss me!" he commanded.

THE END

Packet Seeds Are Of Good Quality

Geneva, N. Y.—Buying packet vegetable seeds with the picture on the packet as a guide is a reasonably safe procedure, for most packet seeds now offered for sale in the neighborhood grocery store and elsewhere are of good quality, declares Prof. M. T. Munn, state seed analyst and head of the seed testing laboratory at the experiment station here.

The few sources of packet vegetable seeds which are not yet entirely reliable can be readily ascertained by the merchant who places the seeds on sale and who consequently should be held responsible, asserts this authority.

"In the spring of the year when one's fancy turns to gardening, about the first thing one does is to consult the seed catalogue; however, many resort to the display box of packet seeds at the nearest grocery store where packet seeds are offered," continues Prof. Munn. "In the past a few of the purely packing concerns did not enjoy an enviable reputation among the seed trade because their packets were of little practical value, but tests each year have shown that such companies have been almost entirely driven from New York state, where the seed law is enforced."

"At the present time most of the companies offering packet seeds in this state have made careful tests of the seeds as to variety and germination or have submitted them to the seed testing laboratory at the experiment station and are certain of the quality they offer. This is a great protection to the seed buying public. There are a few sources, however, who apparently do not as yet offer packets which are entirely worthy of the confidence which the home owner should be able to place in them after he has done much work in garden preparation. Fortunately, local merchants who are really responsible for placing these commission boxes of packets on sale in their store can find out the reliable seed sources. Therefore, any buyer who may be hesitant or who cannot locate seeds of the approved and well-known sources should insist that the dealer assure him that he has exact and dependable information as to the quality he is selling and is ready to stand back of his seeds so that the buyer need suffer no loss or disappointment through poor seed."

The District of Columbia was established under the authority and direction of acts of Congress approved July 16, 1790.

Bouncing Coins

Take two coins that look exactly alike. One is genuine, the other is counterfeit. How can you tell them apart? The secret service men tell us we should throw them on a table. The coin that doesn't bounce is counterfeit.

The coin that bounces is the real thing. Life tests men the same way—by their bounce.

The men who do not possess real worth, quit. The men of value bounce. Lincoln was defeated many times, yet always bounced back and finally bounced into the White House.

Edison failed many times in his effort to invent the incandescent lamp, yet he always bounced back and tried again—and finally won. In the Hall of Accomplishment, you'll find inscribed the names of the men who bounced.

Emerson wrote: "What you are, thunders so loud I can't hear what you say."

The counterfeit coin looks like the genuine, but it isn't. It won't bounce. A man may talk and look like a winner, but the way he actually lives is the test that counts. Meeting the hard knocks, defeats, and setbacks of life with bounce is the supreme test of character and worth.

Be a man with bounce. Husband (to photographer)—You have not made my wife look very attractive.

Photographer (calmly)—Sir, I am a photographer, not a plastic surgeon.

Anything that starts, whatever it may be, must finally end. It is so hard for those who start things, in many cases, to realize this.

The young clerk was summoned to his employer's office.

Boss—Of all my clerks, Freeman, I notice you seem to be the most interested in your work. No hours seem too long for you and you never let the slightest detail escape you.

Young Clerk (with glowing and expectant satisfaction)—Yes, sir. Boss (continuing)—Yes, and so I am forced to fire you. It is such young men-as you who learn here and then go out and start a rival business.

Empress—What was the result of the fight the countess had with her husband?

Garnet—I understand she retained her title.

They say business is booming, but it isn't a real boom till they begin robbing the cows to sell city lots.

There is a great deal of disappointment in buying in large quantities to get lower prices. The big supplies on hand often inspire an extravagance, or at least a carelessness that more than eats up the savings in cost.

New Hire Hand—Well, boss, what time do I have to get to work tomorrow?

Farmer—Oh, any time you like, just so it ain't later than half past four.

Lines to a Lot of Young Men

You may lead your girl to the altar, But it is you who gets the halter.

George—Is your girl a positive or a negative character?

Horace—Both.

George—How come, both?

Horace—Well, I proposed to her last night and she said: "positively no."

You may have friends you like, but nowhere on earth can you find a friend so bubbling with brotherly love as a politician up for reelection.

The Moss Feature Syndicate, Greensboro, N. C.

How's That?

Columbia, S. C. (P)—The prisoner, charged with looting and loitering, told Recorder Heyward Brockington that he had just completed a sentence on the county chain gang. The judge asked why the defendant was sentenced. The man replied, "Provocable carelessness."

At the last meeting of the year of the Dramatic Club to be held next Wednesday night at the Normal School, the apprentices who have earned membership in the organization because of their work during the year, will become members in the true sense of the word. At this meeting a report will also be given on the presentation of "Death Takes a Holiday" as given in Newburgh. A cast and committees will be appointed for work on "Yes, My Darling Daughter," the major production of the Dramatic Club for the year to be given on June 10.

National Music Week Observed

The entire practice school will take part in a national music program to be presented in the Normal School auditorium on Thursday, May 16. Grades 1 through four are under the direction of Miss Jennie Lee Dann, grades five to nine are under Miss Harding, and the Junior High Band is under the direction of Howard B. Hoffman. The program is so set up as to depict the folk songs of the different sections of the country. Grades five to nine will present a program of folk music much of which was brought to this country by the early Huguenots, Quakers and Puritan settlers. Although this music has been present in the Appalachian Mountain section, it has nevertheless been brought to general notice only in the past few years. Varied types of music will be presented, including "play game" songs, folk dances, scolding ballads, rounds and canons, love songs, work songs and hymn tunes. Under the direction of Gordon Kelder, the ninth grade will present a short dramatization of one of the interesting customs of the mountain people and a quartet of ninth-grade students will sing one of the hymn tunes. Dutch Royalty Reaches London

London, May 13 (AP)—The heirs to the royal house of The Netherlands—Princess Juliana, her husband Prince Bernhard, and their two children—arrived in London today.

Princess Juliana led her two-year-old daughter Beatrix by the hand, while nine-months-old Irene was brought in a gas-proof box. Prince Bernhard carried one end of the box and a nurse the other.

The Earl of Harewood, brother-in-law of King George VI, met the royal family at the station.

A communique issued by the foreign office, with authority from the Dutch legation, stated that "Her Royal Highness Princess Juliana of the Netherlands arrived in London today, accompanied by the two young princesses, Beatrix and Irene."

"People of the Netherlands will be very happy to learn that their beloved princess is in safety. It is, of course, of paramount importance even if the worst should happen (for which fortunately there is no indication at present) that the royal house of Orange-Nassau should be safe."

"Prince Bernhard has accompanied the princess and their daughters to London with the intention of resuming his duties as aide-de-camp to the queen as soon as at all possible."

The name "Irene," signifying "peace," was chosen by Bernhard and Juliana for their infant daughter born within a month of the outbreak of the current European war because, Bernhard said at the baptism, "peace has such great importance for all in the present times."

Dutch Withdraw Forces From Meer

Amsterdam, May 13 (AP)—The Netherlands high command reported today a withdrawal of its forces "with slight losses" at IJssel Meer (Zuider Zee) while to south German and Dutch troops were engaged west of IJssel river.

The IJssel river flows through Gelderland province, east central Netherlands, parallel with and about 30 miles from the border with Germany.

The high command's communique broadcast from Hilversum, 40 miles west of the IJssel, said: "German troops which crossed the IJssel are in contact with the Dutch in west Gelderland."

"At IJssel Meer the Dutch have withdrawn with slight losses. "In the south of Rotterdam there still are some Germans, but they are without artillery."

250 Are Injured At Port Jervis

New York, May 13 (AP)—A too-swift approach to a station where a preceding section was pulling out was the tentative explanation today by Erie railroad officials for a collision at Port Jervis, N. Y., in which 250 were hurt, 35 seriously enough for hospitalization.

The accident early yesterday involved two of five excursion trains carrying International Business Machine employees from the company's Endicott, N. Y., factory for a two-day outing at the New York World's Fair.

Most of the injured suffered only minor cuts, bruises and shock. About 215 were treated at the Hotel New Yorker, headquarters for I.B.M. workers, 10,000 of whom came from all over the nation to attend the fair.

The locomotive of the fourth section, piloted by Engineer Edward Smith of Port Jervis, struck the empty rear coach of the third section as the latter started to leave the station. The shock threw passengers on both trains from their seats, broke windows and toppled baggage from racks.

Preliminary reports, the Erie said, indicated that "signals functioned properly and that the engineer of the second train apparently approached too fast."

HIGH TIDE

By Frances Hanna

She was looking for shipwrecked treasure
But the tide brought in castaway love—

Chapter One

Salvage

SOMETHING was floating on the water about two or three miles off shore. It could be almost anything, Jan reflected, but it was probably a dead barracuda.

The annoying thing about curiosity is that it won't leave you alone until you satisfy it. Rigid self-discipline was the only means of counteracting it, Jan decided. She attempted discipline by laying down her binoculars, stepping back from the parapet, and surveying her latest work of art with a critical frown.

"It's terrible—awful—rotten!" she pronounced, adding, "as usual."

Carefully, rebellion rankling in her eyes, she picked up a cloth and wiped the canvas clean, erasing an impossibly blue and cheerful sea supporting an impossibly neat white ship.

"Why can't I do it?" she cried, her young face tight with despair. "Why?"

She knew there was no answer which could satisfy. Loving the wide sweep of ocean stretching before her from this roof-top, loving to paint, having studied and studied ART, still she could not catch that essence of beauty and briny majesty on canvas.

No use trying to do anything more today, she thought. The sun was setting with a splendor that mocked her futile attempts to catch it with a paint brush. The tide was running "in," curling white and foamy on the brown sand before her house, depositing its burden of shells, seaweed, and tiny sand crabs. Jan snatched up the binoculars from her deck chair and stared out over the water. That something still bobbed around in the trough of the waves way out beyond the fishing pier. It wasn't a boat nor a box—it looked human.

She resisted the impulse to run for her boat and investigate. Surely no human being would be swimming in a cold March sea with evening coming on, and if they were, they would certainly swim in now with the tide. Another hour and the high tide would give way to the dragging heavy ebb. With a shrug she put her hands and the canvas in a wickerproof locker and began to fold the easel. Again she picked up the binoculars. The bobbing thing was farther out now.

"You may as well go!" she scolded herself. "If you don't you'll be imagining fantastic things such as silks, golden coins, or abandoned animals floating around out there. Of course you needn't worry about the dinner you should be cooking."

Lifting a trap door she stepped down on a ladder and scrambled into the depths of the house. On the way to the front door she picked up a thick sweater and a scarf to tie down her sun-bleached curls. She'd be warm enough in her old flannel slacks and sweat shirt. She hurried past hamburger stands still boarded up from winter, past a few prematurely and hopefully opened concessions, to the end of the long pier where she kept her combination sail and motor boat and where the big deep sea fishing barges anchored.

'Leave Me Alone'

"WHAT'S up?" the lifeguard called from the float below. "After more salvage? Or another cat in distress?"

"Hello, Frank. Oh, I don't know what it is. I saw something tossing around out there and my woman's curiosity got the better of me. You didn't see anyone go in for a swim, did you?"

"No, Jan. Too cold yet. Want me to go out with you?"

"I can manage, thanks. You might run over to the house."

Shifting the heavy key she used for ballast to balance her weight, she leaned over the side of the boat and caught hold of the man's hair, jerking his head back, keeping his face up out of the water. She pulled hard. He raised his arm weakly, trying to free himself. His face twisted in faint anger.

"If you don't get in this boat I'll signal the lifeguard," she threatened. "What are you trying to do, kill yourself?"

"Yes," he gasped. "Go away. Leave me alone—leave me alone!"

She tightened her grip although the boat was tipping crazily and the water pushed greedy fingers over the sides. Her shoulder ached with strain. She wished she hadn't sent Frank to the house.

His voice was so weak she had trouble making out his words. "Leave me alone. Go away."

though, and tell Lance I'll be back in a jiffy. I forgot to tell him."

Frank, wrapped in his great sweater with the lifeguard insignia on the front, of it, cast off her sixteen foot boat when she started the motor. "Good fishing," he called, as the boat headed for the end of the breakwater.

Out in the open sea the water was choppy and feathery salt spray smacked her dark gold skin. There was still enough light to see clearly. A sense of exaltation tingled through her, effacing today's disappointment, as she felt the frail boat slide over smooth swells.

She laughed out loud, happily, unafraid. "The sea is my love," she fancied. "A teasing, taunting lover I can't capture."

Now she looked back and saw she had come a good two miles. Her "treasure" should be very near now. There, over there. It was—

"Oh, dear Lord," she whispered sickly. "It is human! A man—but is he dead or alive?"

Cutting the motor she expertly guided the boat close and looked into dark eyes that held consciousness. She tossed a length of stout rope to him, shouting, "Grab it and I'll pull you in!"

He ignored the rope. He rolled heavily from side to side, floating, not swimming, appearing entirely apathetic and frighteningly half-drowned.

"Get in here, you fool!" she yelled. "You'll drown."

For no reason at all a story of Shelley flashed to her mind, of how the poet and his wife were paddling in a boat on the Bay of Spezia, Italy, when he suddenly determined to jump overboard and end it all. His wife, however, dissuaded him by joking of dying with empty stomachs when delicious food awaited them at their hotel.

"Aren't you hungry?" she shouted. "I'll give you fried chicken if you come home with me."

"Please Don't Die"

A WISPY grin flicked his mouth. He rolled over with a last burst of strength, loosening her grip on his hair, and lay like a water-logged fish with distended bloodshot eyes mocking at her.

Frightened beyond calm reasoning, cold with the salt-laden breath of death, whipping close, Jan screamed at him, "Don't die—please don't die! You're no right to take your own life. Let me help you—please let me save you!"

She was not even aware that tears rolled down her piteously pleading face.

She saw an expression of stark amazement in his eyes. Again she reached for him and this time he made no attempt to resist. Tugging, straining, careful not to upset the wavering craft, she hauled him little by little into the bottom of the boat. Trembling from effort, shaken with relief, she tossed her warm sweater over his body clothed only in brief swimming trunks. So tall and long and thin he was, he nearly filled all the space.

He glared at her balefully. His voice croaked "I'm sorry through his throat: 'You'll be sorry for this, you meddler.' His eyes closed. He was unconscious."

An hysterical giggle broke from Jan as she started the motor and headed back toward the pier. Night robbed the sky with dark gray velvet as fog pulled its misty counterpane over the sea. Jan had salvaged many things but never a man. Once before she had saved a life: that of a great Persian cat who clung to a lifebuoy and who had dug great furrows in her hands and arms when she rescued him. In the face of all evidence to the contrary she knew he was a survivor of a pleasure yacht which had fouled on rocks far up the coast some three days before she found him. Someone, she was sure, who loved him and knew his courage, had put him on that lifebuoy and given him a chance to live. She called him "Neptune."

She looked down at the man with contemptuous pity. He hadn't as much courage as her cat. Destroying himself. Why? A dozen surmises stirred her imagination, then it occurred to her a person was entitled to possession of anything he salvaged. Therefore, this man was hers! A man of her own. What a crazy notion, but then, her head was apt to fill with crazy notions at any time. She had far too much imagination, Lance asserted. What in the world could she do with this man, she who had never yet found time for a sweetheart because of her painting, her house, her ocean, and Lance. Love was a word she applied to her emotion for these things and for Lance.

"Silly girl!" she said, halting her thoughts.

Frank was waiting, worried, when she ran alongside the wooden float by the crescent piling of the pier.

"It's a man, Frank. Half-drowned. Help me get him to the house, will you?"

She evaded the questions he fired at her without seeming even to hear them. She had no right to tell anyone this man had deliberately invited death. "I'll never tell," she thought and shivered.

"You were gone so long I thought maybe your motor stalled and you couldn't get up the sails," Frank said, hoisting the man up over his bulky shoulders.

Jan tied the boat fast and followed him up the plank runway to the cement surface above. A few lights were straggling on and a half-dozen people loitered around the open concession booths which offered prizes to ball throwers, penny pitchers and hoop tossers. This Jan thought, is typical of Los Angeles—pretending summer in March.

A long block away from the turn into the amusement pier, hedged on either side by ramshackle cottages and hot dog stands crouching beside the strip of cement beach walk, was a rambling house of rough, weather-stained shingles which had once been dark red before the sun and fog got in their work. Into this house turned Jan and Frank and Frank's burden.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press)

Boom!
Revere, Mass.—It aroused Mrs. Mollie Langone's curiosity when her two tiny sons and a chum came into the house to get matches to light "firecrackers." Following them in the yard she discovered the fireworks were three sticks of dynamite they had found in a vacant lot.

A Sweet Mess
Winchester, Va.—Four trucks parked in a residential section were moved by police order after complaints poured into the office of Mayor Charles R. Anderson. The trucks' cargo was 42 hives of honey bees, brought to Frederick county to pollinate apple orchards. The bees started investigating the neighborhood which started the trouble.

30-Year Hunch
St. Paul—When Mrs. Henry Kahner lost her wedding ring 30 years ago, she wouldn't let her husband replace it—she believed it would turn up some day. A few days ago, W. A. Pate, digging in his garden at Reedsville, Wis., where the Kahners used to live, found the ring.

Jarring Discovery
Omaha, Neb.—The rear compartment of a car which police charged to be following flew open when the wheels bumped over an extra-large chuck hole. Inside they spotted an assortment of tires, other automobile parts. The driver of the car, police said, admitted that he and a companion had stripped more than 40 cars.

Minister of Music At First Dutch Church

MISS LUCILLE CUTLER

The consistency of the First Reformed Church recently added to its staff of paid workers Miss Lucille Cutler, who will come to Kingston in September to assume the duties of minister of music and director of religious education in that church. She is a graduate of the Ohio University School of Music, from which university she also received a master's degree for work in sociology and psychology. She is also a graduate of the Westminster Choir College in Princeton, N. J., of which Dr. John Finley Williamson, founder of the famous Westminster Choir, is the president. Miss Cutler, whose home is in Boone, Ia., comes from the First Presbyterian Church of Mount Vernon, Ohio, where she has served as minister of music and director of young people's work for the past three years. Previous to her work there, and while a student at Westminster Choir College she was the minister of music at the Titusville, N. J., Presbyterian Church. In addition to her regular duties at the church she has carried out classes in Mount Vernon and Gambia in the revival of national folk dancing and singing games, which are coming to be recognized as of great recreational value to adults as well as to children and young people.

It will be the purpose of the Westminster system to organize several different choral groups within the church, such as a choral union for adults, a high school choir, and other junior choirs. These groups will sing from time to time in the regular church services, as vespers services, in concerts, and in special programs as occasions may arise. Small ensembles will also be organized, such as trios, quartets, and string ensembles, and private lessons will be given to individuals possessing outstanding ability. Special emphasis will be given to the work among the children and young people, as those are the training groups for the future. Organization of the Choir Mothers will help with robing of the groups, social activities, securing new members, and assisting with other matters pertaining to the choral groups as they arise.

Miss Cutler will sponsor a program of religious education in the church and at Bethany Chapel, which will also be included in the musical program. This will deal with such phases of religious education as religious dramas, Bible stories, creative, handwork, projects, special study groups, and recreation. Miss Cutler has attended conferences of the International Council of Religious Education, and last summer was a counselor in one of the youth camps, the Geneva Point Camp, at Lake Winnepesaukee, N. H.

The general program in the Kingston church is expected to develop along these lines, according to the amount and kind of ability and leadership which comes from the groups among which the work is carried out.

Service League Entertained

The members of the "Cheerio" group of the Y. W. C. A. were the guests of the Service League of the Elmendorf Street Presbyterian Church at its regular monthly meeting in the Ramsey Memorial Building Tuesday afternoon. After the business meeting the "Cheerio" girls won the enthusiastic applause of their audience with their singing of negro spirituals. They sang "Go Down Moses," "I've Got a Robe," and "Jacob's Ladder" with a most sympathetic interpretation of this type of American folk song.

In response to many requests the Service League will again sponsor a May festival similar to the one held last year. Friday evening, May 31, in the lower assembly hall of the Ramsey Memorial Building, Mrs. Clifford Van Valkenburgh will be general chairman with members of the league assisting with the arrangements.

A roast beef supper will be held the evening of May 23, under the supervision of Mrs. Leon Clark and Mrs. J. S. Shultz.

The Service League will have charge of the annual sale for the Blind on Friday afternoon, May 24.

Nine members were in attendance at the 61st annual meeting of the North River Presbyterian Society held last month at the Bethlehem church in Salisbury Mills. Most interesting and entertaining reports of the sessions were given by Mrs. John Terwilliger and Mrs. Clifford Van Valkenburgh.

A social hour was enjoyed during which tea was served, the hostesses being Miss Harriett Eckert, Mrs. Leon Clark and Mrs. Kenneth Lantry.

Home Shorthand Course
An Aid In Winning Jobs

Enter Skilled Worker Class

The old, old story! Another girl is chosen for the job you're after because she has the shorthand training you lack.

But you could change failure into a success story if you'd use your spare time to teach yourself shorthand. Then you'd be prepared to step into the well-paid class of skilled workers.

And Pitman shorthand is simple! Instead of writing out the many letters used in longhand spelling you jot down brief symbols based on the sounds in our language. "Light," for instance, is a curve followed by a tiny "v." The symbol for "buy" is a slanting stroke and a "y."

There are so few sounds it won't take you long to master all the Pitman symbols. Practice a while each day, saying the words aloud to train your pencil and your ear to work together.

Soon you'll be taking real dictation. And what a help the time-saving Pitman short forms are for words you use often, such as "gentlemen."

Let shorthand be your key to a good job. Our 32-page booklet teaches Pitman shorthand in easy lessons. Gives short forms, phrase forms, exercises for practice. Tell how to gain speed.

Send 10c in coin for your copy of SELF-INSTRUCTION IN SHORTHAND to Kingston Daily Freeman, Home Service, 635 Sixth Ave., New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly, your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

Chrysanthemum Held Sacred

In China the chrysanthemum is revered as a sacred thing, and pilgrimages are made yearly to the River Kai where natives drink of the petal-strewn waters in the hope of gaining long life. The type of chrysanthemum which grows there is a tiny plant or bush, with blossoms little larger than a "bachelor button." It is called chrysanthemum indicum and is a far cry from the giant ostrich feather types we grow in the United States. Whereas we wear our flowers and decorate our homes with them, the ancients worshipped them. In Japan a yearly festival is held in their honor, at which time a festive drink is made from the petals. The imperial emblem of Japan represents a 16-petaled chrysanthemum.

Midget Kitchen

Home builders are cautioned not to condense the kitchen so as to make it too small for use. A kitchen can be efficient even though it may not be as small as a Pullman car kitchen. Despite the fervor for "step-saving," a happy medium should be maintained between the Pullman kitchen and the old-fashioned kitchen. The kitchen does double duty. It serves as a cooking center, and at the same time it is a storage place for fishes, utensils, cleaning materials, and other household gadgets and equipment. Sufficient space for storage is of vital importance in the planning of a kitchen for a small modern home.

COCKTAIL PARTY ETIQUETTE DETAILED FOR WIFE WHO'S NEVER BEEN TO ONE

Correspondent, Who Doesn't Look Forward Especially to This One, Is Told She Needn't Have Alcoholic Drink

With such a very short space in which to answer a reader's question, I can't feel leaving short of breath when handed a letter like this one: "Please describe the whole general procedure of what to expect at a cocktail party. How long are we supposed to stay; what do we wear, am I supposed to answer the invitation which is written on the host's Mr. and Mrs. visiting card? These people are almost strangers to us but they are very hospitable and my husband thinks we should accept. I have never been to a cocktail party before, and don't especially look forward to this one."

Beginning then with answering the invitation. If B. S. Y. P. or "please reply" is written on it, you may telephone your answer to one whom you know very slightly as well as to an intimate friend. But if you write an answer to the stranger, you should write on note paper in the third person. Invitations from intimate friends may be answered on your ordinary visiting card: "With pleasure Jan. 6." The inside of a double card is not a correct substitute for note paper, nor is its length necessary for a three or four-word message. If there is no request for a reply, it is not considered necessary to answer since you are going. It would however be courteous to send regrets if you were not going.

You wear a street dress and a hat, and your husband an ordinary sack suit. He will probably go to the party direct from his office. Even if he goes home to change, ordinary business clothes are proper. But if he is a formal type of person, he may prefer a starched shirt, black sack coat and striped trousers, which would also be correct in a formal community. At a house where people are known to stay overnight, you may perhaps stop in on your way to a dinner. In this case, you would of course wear evening clothes.

If the invitation reads "5:30 to 7" you go at whatever time you choose between these hours and stay for as long, or as short, a time as you like. If you are asked at a definite hour—at six, let us say you go promptly at that hour or not much later than a quarter past.

Since a cocktail party is always informal, the roof of your host serves as an introduction, and you talk with any one you find yourself next to. The only particular rules of etiquette at a cocktail party are two. First, you need not take any strong cocktails unless you choose to. There should be an alternate choice of tea or plain fruit juice or other nonalcoholic beverage, and if there isn't, lack of consideration is that of the hostess for not providing anything for you, not yours for having to say "No thank you." Second, you must however say "No thank you" graciously and not with any evidence of criticism.

You help yourself to whichever appetizers you like.

If you don't like these either, then have a good time talking! If you have to leave very soon, you go to your hostess and say, "I'm so sorry we have to go. Thank you for a lovely time. If this last is not true then say, 'Thank you for thinking of me, or 'I hope to see you soon' or whatever is polite and true!" (Released by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

Hospitals Observe Nightingale Day

The 125th anniversary of the birthday of Florence Nightingale was observed in the city on Sunday at both the Kingston and Benedictine Hospitals. Throughout the afternoon Kingston and Ulster county people took advantage of the "open house" held by each hospital and visited the hospitals on conducted tours and enjoyed refreshments served by the auxiliary members.

The Kingston Hospital, which made elaborate preparations for the success of the day held its open house in both the hospital and the nurses' home. A receiving line of auxiliary members welcomed the visitors as they entered the hospital and a corps of nurses from the alumnae association conducted groups on tours of the hospital. Everything was immaculate and in its place. The rooms and hallways and reception rooms were decorated with special baskets of spring flowers and the patients who were receiving visitors were dressed in their prettiest for the occasion.

Four baskets of particularly beautiful flowers had been sent previously by Irving Rubin of Cy's Diner and these added greatly to the attractive decorations.

The Nurses' Home was also adorned with spring flowers and while the visitors gathered around the attractively appointed punch table, the Dunbar trio played chamber music, creating a pleasant atmosphere to the afternoon. The whole affair was conducted on a tasteful and charming scale and all the visitors were made welcome.

Members of the Nurses' Alumnae, who acted as escorts through the hospital departments were Mary Tongue, Dorothy Schwalback, Dorothy Shurtz, Jennie Lucchesse, Inez Boice, Helen Rifanoff, Gladys Offick, Grainger Stewart and Dorothy Buddenhausen.

Miss Almira Porter, director of the School of Nursing and Miss Jessie P. Allan, superintendent of the hospital, also acted as hostesses in the hospital and Nurses' Home respectively.

At the Benedictine Hospital, the open house, although not held in such an elaborate plan, was also visited by many friends. Here, too, bouquets and baskets of spring flowers were in the corridors and rooms and the hospital facilities were open for inspection.

In the receiving line and presiding at the punch table were Mrs. J. Schuyler Schonger, Miss Anne Campbell, Mrs. James T. O'Reilly, Mrs. Edward B. Loughran, Mrs. Charles Mullen and Mrs. George W. Moore. Other members of the auxiliary were through the hospital to act as escorts.

The Hospital Day observance for the Benedictine Hospital began at 8 o'clock with a special Mass for the nurses and staff and a communion breakfast served in the Nurses' Home.

The Kingston Hospital Auxiliary wishes to thank all those who contributed in any way through food or money for the success of the day, to The Freeman for its splendid publicity in advance of the day and to station WKNY for its great assistance. The auxiliary also wishes to thank the business and professional men who gave of their time and efforts to speak on the hospital programs in preparation for the National Hospital Day.

Market Nervous And Irregular

Although Saturday's short session of the Stock Exchange was still dominated by news from the battle front in Europe, the effect of the shock that followed the invasion of the low countries and that sent prices tumbling Friday had lost much of its force. The market was nervous and irregular in tone, but some of the war favorites made substantial gains and industrials and rail in the Dow-Jones averages even showed slight gains for the day. The former closed at 144.85, a gain of .08 for the day and rails were ahead .02, to 29.81. Utilities were off .19, to close at 23.81. The turnover of 671,970 was largest for a Saturday since April 20. Curtiss-Wright, most active stock for the day, gained 1/4 point, Douglas rose three points and Lockheed was up 1 1/4. Steels were active, Bethlehem gaining 2 1/2 points and U. S. being up 1 1/4. Anaconda was again among the active issues, showing a gain of 1 1/4 for the day. Loft, second most active stock of the day, dropped 1/4, in a turnover of 26,500 shares.

Most commodity markets continued their rise Saturday, although profit-taking after Friday's rise caused a weakening in some commodities, including rubber, cocoa and cottonseed oil. Wheat prices steadied after early weakness and closed up 1/4 to off 1/4. Cotton futures rallied sharply in early trading and closed with gains of nine to 14 points. There were further gains in sugar futures. Raw sugar was steady and sales showed advances of about 10 points. A shipment of Philippine raws due May 20 brought 2.90 cents a pound. Wool top futures met further support and average price of 10 types of apparel wool was 80.7 cents, against 80.6 the previous week and 80.3 two weeks ago.

Belgian bonds broke sharply. The 6 1/2% of '49 lost 29 1/2 points, and the 6% of '55 dropped 36 1/2 points. Treasury issues were easier with losses of as much as 10-32 point.

According to investigation by the SEC millions of dollars of worthless Canadian stocks are being sold in this country every year. Of mining stocks offered here illegally it is stated that not one during the past four years has paid a dividend or even gone into profitable production.

Bad Check Charge

Joseph Stein, 40, of Granite, upholsterer, arrested at Ellenville by Trooper William Reynolds, was held at the Ulster county jail to await a hearing tonight before Justice James R. Doyle on a charge of passing a worthless check.

New York, May 13 (AP)—The stock market today suffered its worst tumble since last September as traders turned pessimistic over European battle trends.

Two heavy selling waves, one shortly after the opening and the other around midday, knocked down leaders 2 to 7 points and put the ticket tape as much as 4 minutes behind floor dealings. A little support arrived near the final hour and cut extreme losses. The pace slowed on the comeback. Transfers were at the rate of about 2,000,000 shares.

The speed of the drive, particularly against stocks known to be widely held abroad, led some brokers to conclude that foreign liquidation may have been a factor. Wall street, which views Nazi successes as bearish, found little cheer in overnight dispatches.

Prominent sliders were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, Douglas Aircraft, American Airlines, Allied Chemical, Goodyear, U. S. Rubber, Anaconda, Westinghouse, Eastman Kodak, Johns-Manville, Loft, American Telephone, N. Y. Central, Great Northern and American Tobacco "B."

Topping in the curb were Aluminum of America, Aluminum Ltd., American Export Lines, Bell Aircraft, E. W. Bliss and Master Electric.

Plane Is Wrecked During Regatta; Girl Is Killed

The pilot of an airplane which hit a high tension wire and crashed into the Hudson river yesterday at Hudson, killing a woman passenger, was in a "fairly favorable" condition today, the Associated Press reports.

The dead woman was Georgette Gaydoul, 26, of Martindale, Columbia county. She and Pilot Louis Hatzfeld, 30, of Rye, were following the annual Albany-New York outboard motorboat race when the plane struck the wire, which state police estimated as about 150 feet above the water.

The plane sank, and one of the boat racers picked up Hatzfeld, who was transferred to a rowboat and taken to a Catskill hospital. State police recovered Miss Gaydoul's body with grappling hooks several hours later. Coast guardsmen raised the plane.

Students Are Advised

The British legation to the Holy See, as well as authorities at the Vatican, were reported reliably to have advised the English and Scottish students it would be prudent for them to go home.

Infantry, carabinieri and mounted police in doorways, courtyards and streets prevented groups of students from reaching the British and French embassies. It was reported the Italian students had been let off from their classes for what was planned to be a large demonstration.

Italian authorities resumed requisitioning trucks for the second time since the outbreak of the war last September.

A reliable source said 2,000 trucks were requisitioned in Rome alone.

Churchill Reports One of Greatest Battles in Making of Commons today that the allied armies in the low countries were meeting the Germans in the preliminary phases of one of the greatest battles of history.

Britain's dynamic new chief reported the formation of a war cabinet of five men was carried out in one day because of "the extreme urgency and rigor of events."

He told the house, suddenly summoned from recess for a day, that "I have nothing to offer but blood, toil, tears and sweat."

Churchill received a great ovation as he appeared.

"Our policy," Churchill said, "is to wage war by sea, land and air with all our might and with all the strength that God can give us and to wage war against a monstrous tyranny never surpassed in the dark and lamentable catalogue of human crime."

He called on the House to "declare its conscience in the new government by approving a resolution he presented that his ministry represented 'the united and inflexible resolve of the nation to prosecute the war with Germany to a vigorous conclusion.'"

Churchill emphasized the seriousness of his task of cabinet-making by stating that "we are in the preliminary phase of one of the greatest battles in history. We are in action at many other points—in Norway and in Holland and we have to be prepared in the Mediterranean." * * *

On the question of Britain's aim, Churchill said in ringing tones: "I can answer in one word—it is victory—victory at all costs in spite of all sacrifices."

He warned, however, that there were "many, many long months of struggle and suffering" ahead.

$75,000 Fire Hits Saugerties Block On Partition St.

in one of the worst fires ever to visit the village.

One fireman, William Freleigh, Saugerties volunteer fireman, was injured when he jumped from a ladder placed against a burning wall. He was treated by Dr. Lester A. Sonking for a sprained ankle.

Starting in old dry sheds formerly occupied by the Saugerties Coal and Lumber Company, back of the fire house, the flames apparently had been burning for some time before they burst into a veritable inferno about 4 o'clock, and spread so quickly that the Saugerties fire department was unable to cope with the fire. Aid was summoned from surrounding towns and it was two hours before the blaze was under control and then only after the lumber yard and buildings had been leveled, the brick firehouse completely destroyed, Bill's Garage and the adjoining bowling alleys gutted.

Residents in the vicinity say they observed smoke in the rear for some time but it was believed that it came from burning rubbish or leaves, and little attention was paid to it. The lumber yards were not in use, the office and stock having been moved some time ago to another yard near the railroad.

The sheds which stood at the rear of the fire house, garage and bowling alleys were dry as tinder and supplied the flames with fuel. All that remained of the yard was a portion of the former office along Partition street.

Burning Some Time

Frank Tongue, one of the fire commissioners of the village, said today that apparently the fire had been burning for some time without attracting attention. Only a block from the main business corner of the village, it was observed by a few people who believed neighbors were burning rubbish. At about 4 o'clock the fire burst out and spread very rapidly. Among the first to arrive was Chief Richter of the Saugerties police and a call was sent in for firemen.

When discovered the flames were sweeping through the dry buildings with such rapidity that it was impossible to remove property of the fire company members on the second floor of the engine house although all apparatus and fire equipment on the ground floor was removed to safety.

There was delay in getting men to fight the blaze since many of the men were in Kingston attending the Hudson Valley Apple Blossom Festival and they did not arrive until a broadcast at the ceremonies had notified them of the urgency of their return.

Spreading with great rapidity the fire communicated to the brick engine house which housed the Washington Hook and Ladder Company and the R. A. Snyder Hose Company. This building was completely destroyed and all that remains are the four brick walls.

Flames quickly communicated to the former Van Buskirk Garage building on partition street from the sheds which ran around in back of that structure. The building was gutted also. Half of the building adjoining the fire house was used by Bill's Garage and next to that were the bowling alleys operated by Joseph Sangi of Glasco and Charles Marabell of this city under the name of Sam-Mar Bowling alleys. There had been six new alleys placed in the building last fall and damage amounting to $10,000 was done the alleys and building. A portion of the roof at the rear of the alleys and the Camher garage fell in.

When the seriousness of the fire was seen aid was summoned from Centerville, Glasco, Catskill and Kingston to aid the three pieces of Saugerties apparatus. Fire Chief Murphy ordered the Wiltyck pumper with Captain Conlin and Fireman Harry Richter to the scene and also went to Saugerties afternoon, but which held off until the parade was finished and the ceremonies connected with the crowning of the queen were nearly completed.

Festival Parade Is One of Best Ever Held in Kingston

Police Head Parade

The parade was headed by a platoon of Kingston police which led the first musical unit, the Delmar Drum Corps, who later took first place in the competition held in the state armory.

The drum corps headed the American Legion at the head of whom marched Mayor C. J. Heiselmann followed by the members of Kingston Post and the visiting Posts of the Hudson valley. There were two locomotives of the 40 & 8 in the line of march, and the "coy" lassie that rode with the Legionnaires caused many a chuckle as did the "colored lass" equipped with a sunshade and an umbrella who daintily held up her skirts to keep them from dragging on the pavement.

The Legion boys evidently got as much kick out of the parade as did the spectators.

The floats entered by Greene, Columbia, Orange, Schoharie, Dutchess, Rockland and Ulster counties which carried the county queens and their attendants, were bowers of beauty, and came in for hearty applause along the line of march.

Tough on Judges

Judging from the appearance of the queens and their courts as they passed the reviewing stand at the Governor Clinton Hotel, the judges in the beauty contest later in the afternoon had a difficult job in selecting the Blossom Festival Queen.

Columbia county, whose queen was awarded the title of festival queen, was represented by a number of artistic floats, while Orange county and Dutchess county floats were artistic creations delighting the eye.

That this area of New York State is Rip Van Winkle Land was emphasized by the appearance of old Rip himself, who marched with the Greene county unit in the parade and was greeted with applause.

The Kingston High School Band marched in the parade and reflected great credit on Kingston and Ulster county, as did the musical units from the other counties participating in the festival. Several of the school units were headed by dainty majorettes who stepped high, wide and handsome as they swung along directing the bands and drum corps with the skill of seasoned veterans.

Exceptionally attractive were the floats which carried the county queens. Considerable time, thought and skill had been devoted to the decorating of these floats and the judges had a difficult time in selecting the winning floats.

Ulster Division

In the Ulster county division of the parade were the floats entered by the Christian Endeavor Union, the Girl Scouts, the Kingston Power Boat Association, the Governor Clinton Hotel, the Kingston Milk Council, the local D. A. R., the Ulster County Nursing Association, the W. C. T. U. and the N.Y.A.

The Kingston Milk Council float, which won first prize in the commercial division was most attractively gotten up. It was drawn by four sturdy horses and on the float were a group of happy folks, and a real live cow who contentedly ate of the hay provided throughout the course of the parade.

A float that was heartily applauded was the Day Nursery of the Volunteers of America.

The parade marked the appearance also of the fire and drum corps composed of members of the local units of the 156th Field Artillery. The Rosendale Township float carried a number of pretty girls in bathing suits and others ready for skiing and other winter sports.

The Ulster Motorcycle Club also was represented by a number of motorcyclists attractively costumed. As usual the Rifton 4-H drum corps came in for hearty applause.

All of the floats in the parade were built and decorated around the theme of the apple blossom.

The float of the Kingston Milk Council was awarded first place in the commercial and promotional floats in the parade with the float of the Germantown Cold Storage second, and the Girl Scouts third place.

Dutchess county's float was awarded first place in the county floats with Greene and Orange counties tied for second, and Columbia county third.

himself where Fireman Albright and Diamond who were off duty also later joined the local firemen.

So hot was the fire that firemen were driven from the building as the flames spread from the dry sheds at the rear to the structures on the street.

Uniforms of the fire companies stored on the upper floor together with their records and trophies were destroyed when it was found impossible to enter the building.

It was two hours before the flames were checked and firemen continued to pour water on the ruins throughout the night and until Sunday morning when the fire was finally extinguished.

Five trucks in the yard at the rear of the garage were destroyed. It was reported that the fire house and the adjacent building was insured but whether the loss was covered was not immediately known. The fire house was of brick built in 1873 and was topped with a tower in which hung a bell. During the height of the fire the bell dropped from the tower.

A special meeting of the Saugerties village board has been called for this evening to discuss the matter of reconstruction of the fire house.

Judge Traver Dies Sunday; Seriously Ill for Long Time

had been ill following an operation from which he recovered sufficiently to preside at the February term of County Court. Unable to hold the April term, Judge Traver had been confined to his home for the past few weeks.

The death of Judge Traver will be very keenly felt throughout the city of Kingston and Ulster county where his friends number into the thousands. He was a broadminded man, looking at significant questions from a rational standpoint and reaching his conclusions after hard logical thinking. His advice was sought by men in all walks of life and his counsel was considered of the best.

Not only in the legal matters but in the solution of many of life's problems his counsel was sought by men and women and his wide experience gave to them valuable advice. In addition to holding the position of county judge, Judge Traver was also judge of the Children's Court of Ulster county, a position which calls for the keenest kind of judgment in the solution of the problems of youth of the county. His reputation was unchallenged among welfare workers and those with whom he came in contact while engaged in the duties of Judge of the Children's Court and his counsel and judgment was widely sought.

Judge Traver never courted popularity, caring more for the approval of his own conscience than the applause of the majority, and exemplified in his conduct the lofty ideals of an ancient and noble calling. Still he was perhaps one of the most loved men of the county and one of the most popular public officials of the county. His popularity was well demonstrated throughout his political career when numerous times he was unopposed at the polls and at times endorsed by the opposing political party.

Judge Traver spent practically all of his life as a public servant and unlike many people engaged in public life, the last time he appeared before the voters of the county his popularity was equally as great as at any other time of his career. This indicated the extreme fairness, the impartial and honest manner in which he always administered any public trust given him and the wide circle of friends which he enjoyed throughout the county. Throughout his lifetime Judge Traver was a very ardent worker in the Republican party, actively interested in the welfare of the party and giving much of his time to the organization work.

Despite the fact that he had led an active public career for the greater part of his life, he had prior to his becoming the prosecuting officer of the county and later county judge enjoyed a large law practice. Judge Traver had been associated with Hon. William D. Cunningham in the practice of law here and in Ellenville under the firm name of Cunningham & Traver.

Hon. Frederick Gedney Traver, judge of Ulster county, who had previously won prestige as district attorney of the county and was long an outstanding member of the Ulster County Bar, was born at Marlborough on January 28, 1874, a son of the Rev. V. N. Traver and Ella M. Caine. Judge Traver's father, a Methodist minister who was born in 1838, filled pastorates in various cities in towns in New York and Massachusetts. He died in 1926 at the age of 88, one of the oldest clergymen in the Empire state in point of continuous service.

To the Rev. V. N. Traver and Mrs. Traver, two children were born, Nellie, who married Martin J. DeWitt, Mrs. DeWitt died several years ago, and Frederick G. Traver. Judge Traver attended the public school and took a preparatory course in the Hudson River Institute at Claverack, and then entered Syracuse University from which he was graduated in 1896 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts.

At the conclusion of his college course Judge Traver studied law in the office of the late Judge John G. Van Etten where he remained for one year and then entered the office of Hon. Charles F. Cantine, who served as district attorney of the county and was later elected to the county bench in 1904. During the time Mr. Cantine was district attorney Judge Traver remained in his office and for two years of the time was assistant district attorney.

Was Freeman Employee

During the time Judge Traver was a student he rendered valuable service both in an editorial and man and his well balanced judgment and careful discrimination led to deep regret when he decided to take up the study of law instead of newspaper work.

It was in 1900 that Judge Traver was admitted to the practice of the law and since then had practiced his profession in this city although most of his career was devoted to public service.

Beginning his services in the office of district attorney as a clerk, later to become assistant district attorney, he remained in the office of assistant district attorney throughout the term of Judge Cantine and during the administration of Frederick Stephan, Jr., and with Judge William Cunningham. In 1915 when Governor Charles S. Whitman appointed Judge William D. Cunningham to the Court of Claims, Judge Traver was named to fill the unexpired term caused by Cunningham's resignation and in 1916 was nominated for the office by the Republican party and elected to the office for the full term. He served with such distinction that in 1919 he was re-elected to the office and again in 1922 and 1925 he was re-elected without opposition. Again in 1928 he was unopposed and served until the fall of 1930 when he resigned as prosecuting officer of the county to become the Republican candidate for county judge. Elected to that office by a very handsome majority, Judge Traver assumed office on January 1, 1931 and served out the six year term as county judge and Judge of the Children's Court. In 1936 he was the unanimous choice of the Republican convention for a second term and the Democratic Convention unanimously endorsed his candidacy. It was when nominated at the Republican convention in August, 1936 by Former County Judge Joseph M. Fowler, whom Judge Traver had succeeded, that he announced that he was making his last appeal to any convention for public office and that "win or lose or draw this is the last time that I will seek public office." Unopposed at the election that fall Judge Traver was again elected to public office by a vote which indicated clearly the feeling of friendship of the entire county toward Judge Traver.

On June 19, 1909, Judge Traver was married to Miss Mabel Anderson, daughter of George W. and Julia E. Anderson. Mr. Anderson for many years was a very well known contractor in this and adjacent counties. Mrs. Traver died several years ago.

Judge Traver was a member of the Kingston Kiwanis Club, Mendelsohn Club, Kingston Club, the Psi Upsilon fraternity at Syracuse University, the New York State Bar Association and the Ulster County Bar Association.

Out of respect to Judge Traver, all of the county chambers will remain closed this week and there will be no special session of court on Wednesday, the regular day set for this business.

Judge Traver's body will lie in state at the A. Carr & Son Funeral parlors, 1 Pearl street, Kingston, Tuesday afternoon and evening. Funeral services will be private and burial will be in Montrose cemetery.

Charges She Was Jabbed In Ear With Table Fork

Alleging that Thomas Craig, 36, a negro living on the Hutton brickyard on North street, had picked up a table fork and jabbed her in the ear with it on Sunday morning, Lillian Bailey of 63 Sycamore street, sent for the police and placed Craig under arrest on a charge of third degree assault.

This morning in police court Craig entered a plea of not guilty, and Judge Matthew V. Cahill adjourned the hearing until Wednesday morning, and fixed bail in the sum of $500.

Judges who made the selection of queen, in a decision which is said to have been close, were: Mrs. Mary L. Jobe Akeley of New York city; Prof. Charles B. Upjohn, Department of Ceramics, Teachers College, Columbia University; Martha Deane, radio commentator; Baroness Schiller, New York beauty specialist; John Carlson, Woodstock artist.

Queens representing the other six counties in the competition were: Virginia Hoffman, Ulster; Betty Stryker, Schoharie; Mary Ackerley, Orange; June Hart, Dutchess; Bernice Ballou, Greene; Natalie Keoghán, Rockland.

Sullivan county, which was one of the eight counties originally scheduled to participate in the celebration, failed to send a representative.

The woman said that Sunday morning Craig knocked on her door and she admitted him. At the time she had a friend eating breakfast with her. She said Craig entered the room and without saying a word walked to the table, picked up the fork and jabbed her in the ear.

Kingston High Nine Wins At Ellenville by 12 to 8

In the 1940 version of "A Comedy of Errors," Coach Cliff Miller's Kingston High School's baseball squad won its first victory of the season Saturday afternoon in Ellenville by the score of 12 to 8. No less than 13 errors were recorded, Kingston getting seven and the mountaineers six to make it a hard day for the scorekeepers.

Losing its second in a row, Ellenville just about shoved the decision into Kingston's lap. Then, with a 6-0 lead, the Maroon and White nine returned the motion and tried in vain to give the Robbers the game.

As far as pitching was concerned, both coaches used a steady path from the bullpen to the mound. Bill Windburn started for the Millermen and although he was the winning hurler, he wasn't around at the finish. Hank Tiano came in to quell the rally. Coach Roberts used Sarr and Van Keuren but their "nothing ball" failed to click. Van Keuren was charged with the loss.

Hopper Stars

Ken Hopper, Kingston's right-fielder, finally regained his batting eye and jumped his average to the .300 mark with three hits, one a triple in the first frame when Kingston scored six runs. The big picket line representative also socked in three markers. Johnny Watzka, although booting two balls and "Whitey" Van Buren, banged out two hits apiece to lead the assault on Sarr and Van Keuren. Van Buren also played a flawless game on defense, being the only infielder to escape without an error.

Big First Inning

The Millermen jumped to an early lead in the first session with half of their runs as Ray Sarr was the victim of base hits and a couple of costly miscues on the part of his mates. Hopper's three banger into left center climaxed the scoring.

But Ellenville, taking the advantage of Bill Windburn's wildness and Kingston's sloppy defense, forged back into the battle in its half of the chapter with four runs. Kingston made it 7-4 in the second with two hits and an error. Both clubs dented the payoff plate in the fourth with the men of Miller coming in twice while Coach Roberts' tossers tallied one run.

Hank Tiano took over for Windburn in the sixth after Kingston's number two finger had issued early walks. The East Kingston moundsman fared a little better although he was cooked for single rallies in the sixth and seventh but then went to work and blanked Ellenville for the rest of the way. Kingston pushed across another run in the seventh and topped off the scoring parade with two runs in the ninth.

Elliott Rieger and Levine, collecting two hits apiece, paced Ellenville, the former cracking out two doubles and driving in three runs. Levine batted in two.

Catholic AA League

There will be an important meeting of the officers of the Catholic Athletic Association at St. Mary's Hall Tuesday at 7:30 p. m.

A league for boys of school age will be organized. Managers of the senior softball teams are asked to have team rosters in at this meeting.

Steadiness is the keynote of Mickey Witek, the Giants new second-sacker. Last year he not only led the International League in hits but he batted safely in about 73 per cent of Newark's games. He was "horse-collared" three times in April, eight times in May, five in June, 13 in July, 10 in August, and three times in September. He could punch his hits, too, slugging four perfect days at bat.

PICKING the 500' WINNER

by RALPH DE PALMA

REX MAYS

Indianapolis, Ind. — Rex Mays is the most talented speed driver in the 500-mile race. I say that with all regard for Shaw, Pettilo and the others. Tommy Milton and I were watching him flash around the Indianapolis Motor Speedway a couple of years ago. "If that boy's car will hold up for 500 miles, he'll win this thing," Tommy said. I agreed. And that's still the situation. This tall, slim driver so reminiscent of the great Frank Lockhart, is the "logical" winner of the world's greatest automobile race on May 30th. He's been driving the "500" since 1934, though, and hasn't finished one of them yet. He's held the pole position twice with fastest qualifying time. He's led every race he's driven. But the speed at which he drives simply burns up his cars. But—and it's an important one—this year is different. He's driving for Louis Meyer, the three-time winner who has just retired. With Meyer directing Mays from the pit, and with this boy's natural wizardry at the wheel, it's a potential winning combination.

Leading up to that climactic race is a program of 22 stakes, beginning with the $5,000 Toboggan Handicap and the $2,500 Fashion Stakes today. In all, about $400,000 in purses will be given out at a meeting which is expected to break all records for attendance and the amount of money passing through the new mutuel machines.

There's no doubt that Col. E. R. Bradley's three-year-old is the most talked-of horse in training right now, or that Belmont is the place to determine his greatness. Beaten in the derby by the 35-1 outsider, Gallahadion, Bimelech came back at Pimlico Saturday to score a smashing victory in the Golden Jubilee Preakness before 50,000 fans. Most of them were convinced that he is by all odds the best of the three-year-old crop—possibly living up to Bradley's claim that Bimelech is the best horse he ever owned.

Other fans want to see him in one more real test—the rich Belmont Stakes—before they decide finally. Mioland, beaten by two lengths at a mile and three sixteenths in the Preakness, and the stretch-running Gallahadion, which was third, were full of run at the finish. They might have caught up in a longer race, but Bimelech didn't appear especially tired either.
